

AMERICAN AND BRITISH ARMIES IN SICILY CLOSE RANKS ON CENTER OF BATTLEFRONT; CONCERTED ASSAULT

Eisenhower's Headquarters Announce Junction of American Seventh Army and British Eighth Army Between Bronte and Cesaro — Plight of Enemy Becoming More Difficult Daily

By International News Service
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 10 — The American and British armies in Sicily today closed ranks on the center of the battlefield, establishing an unbroken line of Allied troops for a concerted assault on the key communications center of Randazzo.

Headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced that the junction of the American Seventh Army and the British Eighth Army was effected when patrols of the Eighth linked with those on the right flank of the Americans between Bronte and Cesaro.

The official communique said that the plight of the Germans and Italians was becoming more difficult daily and that the Axis forces were fighting desperately to stave off doom.

Units of the American Seventh Army which went ashore behind the Axis lines west of Sant' Agata seized a coastal strip within five miles of Cape Orlando and took 1,500 prisoners, headquarters disclosed. The surprise maneuver

Gasoline Deliveries Cut To 40% in Area

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(INS)—Any relaxation of the pleasure driving ban in the Philadelphia area will be practically meaningless, it was predicted today.

Deliveries to stations have been cut to 40 per cent of wartime quotas. The wartime quotas were based on 60 per cent of consumption in 1941.

Oil industry spokesmen said the sharp cut for passenger cars will remain in effect for at least a week, due to heavy use of gasoline by commercial vehicles.

More Returns Made In Sale of Bonds and Stamps

In addition to the $6000 worth of war savings stamps and bonds sold by the juniors and girl scouts, the McCrory store sold $724.

The employees of the plants participating in helping to fill the pitchers and knowing how much each stamp meant to those in the fighting line are as follows:

Hunter Manufacturing Corp., $3600; Paterson Parchment Paper Co., $175; Fleetwings, $350; Superior Zinc, $70; Manhattan Soap Co., $669; Bancroft-Hickey, $100; Samuel Jackson Sons, $17; Railway Specialties, $100; Wm. H. Grundy Co., $362.85; Wilson Distillery, $50; Thomas L. Leedom Co., $50; D. Landreth, $14.80.

Rohm & Haas for the past two weeks has had a special war bond drive, and their personnel advises Mrs. J. L. Kilcoyne, chairman for Bensalem and Bristol areas, that the drive is far exceeding their expectations, therefore they did not buy any stamps, but put that money into war bonds.

Music Features Program At Fellowship Meeting

The August meeting of the Men's Christian Fellowship League of Lower Bucks County was held last evening in the Bensalem Methodist Church.

Rev. George C. Larwick, pastor of the Wilkinson Memorial Methodist Church, Croyston, supplied the following instrumental feature: Fred P. Miller, Phila., violinist; Miss Doris Miller, Phila., piano and accordion; Parker Cowgill, Croyston, clarinet and sweet potato.

The program included duets, single numbers and trios. Following the musical program, games of all kinds were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

The September meeting will be held on September 13th, at the Newtown Methodist Church.

DR. FELL IS OLDEST ALUMNUS OF U. OF P.

Doylestown Physician Also Oldest Alumnus of Lafayette College

NOW 93 YEARS OF AGE

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 10 — With the distinction of being the oldest alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. John A. Fell, 93, of E. Oakland avenue, is receiving congratulations from the medical profession and a legion of friends.

Dr. Fell is, likewise, the oldest alumnus of Lafayette College in Easton. Recently the Pennsylvania Gazette, the general magazine and historical chronicle of the University of Pennsylvania, complimented the well-known Doylestown physician editorially.

Dr. Fell practiced medicine in Doylestown until a few years ago. In his more active days he was a member of the Doylestown school board and the Doylestown board of health, and at one time was assistant surgeon of the Sixth Regiment of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

Firemen To Receive Instructions Tonight

All volunteers for drivers, pump operators and hosemen for the Bristol Volunteer Fire Company No. 6 are requested by Chief Engineer, Henry R. Jolly, to report at Fandazzo's garage, Farragut avenue, tonight at seven o'clock.

Instructions will be given in field operations. Clifford Hagerman, chief of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department, with a corps of instructors will be on hand to supervise the operation of the pump and hose lines.

TWO FIRE CALLS

Bristol Consolidated firemen were called out twice yesterday for small fires. There was a small fire at the ruins of the Buckley street mill. Another call was received for a brush fire near the Barton Service Station on Pond street.

Membership Proposals Made at Grange Session

PLUMSTEADVILLE, Aug. 10 — Four proposals for membership were received by Plumsteadville Grange on Friday evening. An investigating committee, composed of Mrs. Horace Overholt, Sylvester Emig, and Arthur Shull, was named by Master Floyd Friling.

R. F. D. service was the topic of the program when four mail carriers and one postmaster spoke to the members describing some of their experiences in getting the mail through.

Postmaster E. B. Melchor pointed out the importance of addressing letters carefully and of tying packages securely.

Newton Kulp, R. F. D. carrier on an Ottsville route for the past 32 years; Ira Wolfinger, Chalfont mail carrier with 23 years of service, and John Landis, Pipersville mail carrier, who at present has the smallest R. F. D. route in the county, gave some of their experiences as mailmen, all of them pointing out that an R. F. D. carrier is called upon to do many things in addition to delivering mail. Hobart Myers, a star route carrier, also spoke briefly.

Isaac Gross gave a brief history of the part the Grange had in securing R. F. D. service. The idea, he pointed out, was first conceived by a Grange member in 1891, and first tried in Chester county, Pa. The next meeting of the Plumsteadville Grange will be held on August 20th when a picnic will be held at the Grange Hall at seven o'clock.

Truckmen Penalized For Extra Deliveries

Operators of more than 100 small delivery trucks in the Philadelphia area have been deprived of 50 to 200 miles in weekly gasoline mileage rations for exceeding their allotted delivery frequencies, the Office of Defense Transportation announced here yesterday.

Those penalized included bread, milk, beer and ice cream delivery trucks which had been permitted to make deliveries from two to six times a week, depending on their essentiality. At hearings before the ODT division of local transport it was testified they had made deliveries on a more frequent basis than permitted.

Scarcity of Boats

(By "The Stroller")
"Why are rescue squads from this section of Bucks County called to do service at Titusville and Washington Crossing?" I was asked the other day.

So I have made some inquiries to learn the facts.

They tell me a squad is being formed at Lambertville, N. J., but as yet does not have a boat. They also tell me that there are no row boats between Lambertville and this section of the Delaware River shore. Not even at Washington Crossing where hundreds bathe and picnic.

It is stated that the Lambertville Rescue Squad recently organized and whose members recovered the body of a man drowned Saturday, had to borrow a boat to get into service.

The Lower Bucks County Marine Association is building a reputation which is spreading even beyond the confines of Bucks County, to such an extent that they are now being called frequently to serve in New Jersey along the upper Delaware River.

COUNCIL APPROVES AGREEMENT TO LOAN APPARATUS TO FIRE COMPANY ORGANIZED IN 6TH WARD

Borough Council last night unanimously approved an agreement entered into by Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, members of the Fire Committee, and the officers of Bristol Volunteer Fire Co. No. 6.

The agreement read by William J. Lefferts, secretary of council, was approved upon motion of John H. Wichser, chairman of the fire committee.

It reads:
Office of Chief Burgess, Bristol, Pa., July 22, 1943.
Bristol Volunteer Fire Co. No. 6, Bristol, Pennsylvania.
Gentlemen:

This is to confirm our verbal agreement of Wednesday, July 21st, 1943, as follows:

Your Company will answer all first alarms in the Sixth Ward of the Borough and all second alarms anywhere in the Borough. Your Chief or Assistant Chief, in the absence of the Chief, will be answerable to our Chief Hagerman of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Company, or in his absence, to either his first or second assistant.

In case of out of town calls, you are to answer the call and notify Bristol Consolidated Fire Headquarters, letting them know where you are and what apparatus you have taken and also call Headquarters upon your return from said fire, so they will know you are available. Oil or gas, or both, will be furnished at the scene of the fire, when required and also additional hose when required, by the Borough.

The Borough agrees to furnish one of the Skid Pumps, mounted on a Borough owned truck, fully equipped with the necessary tools, etc. The pump itself is owned by the United States Government and loaned to Bristol Borough, the Burgess being held responsible for same, as well as the equipment that goes with it, with the exception of the truck, which is Borough owned property. Your Company agrees to maintain and properly care for same.

Bristol Volunteer Fire Company No. 6 agrees to obtain a Charter when Court convenes in September. When this agreement has been approved by your Company and Bristol Borough Council, notice will be published in the Bristol Courier, as information to the public at large.

If there are any points not covered, please advise either Chairman John H. Wichser of the Fire Committee or myself, as we would like to have this passed by Council at our meeting on August 9th, 1943. Yours very truly,
JOHN H. WICHSER,
Chairman, Fire Comm., C. L. ANDERSON,
Burgess,
PAUL D. BROWN,
President, No. 6;
JACK C. FAIRCHILD,
Secretary, No. 6;
WILLIAM LYNCH,
Treasurer, No. 6.

One Man's Opinion

By Walter Kiernan (I. N. S. Staff Writer)
Well, we met up with a fellow yesterday who is rich beyond dreams.

He not only owns two alarm clocks but his wife recently inherited a dozen safety pins.

"What's a couple of old alarm clocks?" he says modestly. "A couple of years ago everybody had alarm clocks. They were as common as rubber bands. . . I also got three rubber bands put away in my safety deposit box."

What's a couple of old alarm clocks indeed?
Right at the beginning of the war and coincident with the drive to get everybody to work every day and on time, they banned the making of alarm clocks.

The man who signed the order is believed to be the same professor who later went on to win fame as the author of the ruling which prohibited the slicing of bread by machine.

He now is awaiting results of the safety pin ban. The first time he sees a baby with diapers sewed on he'll know he has succeeded again.

Thought for the day: The people aren't complacent, they just haven't got alarm clocks to wake them.

CONSTRUCTION OF 100 HOUSES IS UNDER WAY

Brick and Masonry Type; First To Be Completed In 60 Days

ROADWAYS IN LOOPS

Work got underway yesterday afternoon on the construction of 100 houses on the Fleetwings Estates, Inc. The tract of land on which the houses are to be built comprises over 20 acres, and is located directly opposite No. 2 plant of Fleetwings, Division of Kaiser Cargo, Inc., Beaver Dam Road. It was bought from Harry Larzelere and was formerly part of the Larzelere farm. The sale was made through the office of Hugh B. Eastburn.

The architects are Matern-Graft-Paul of New York City. B. V. Zamore, of Montclair, N. J., is the developer, and the project is being financed, according to Mr. Zamore, through the Land Title Bank and Trust Co., of Philadelphia.

In describing the project Zamore said the 100 houses will be of brick and masonry construction. Each house will consist of two bedrooms, living-room, dining-room, kitchen and bath. All houses will have southern exposure, and they will be for both rent and sale. It is expected that the first houses will be completed in 60 days. Each house will have a full basement, hot-air heating equipment to use coal. The bath-rooms will be of tile.

200 Servicemen Protest Blackjacking of Marine

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—(INS)—More than 200 servicemen besieged Philadelphia's City Hall today in angry protest against the alleged blackjacking of a Marine by a policeman.

City officers hastily locked up the building and called upon the shore patrol and military police to break up the crowd which shouted threats to "get" the patrolman they accused of mistreating one of their buddies.

The crowd broke up upon the arrival of about 25 military patrolmen. Philadelphia authorities said the trouble started when the policeman attempted to aid a shore patrol member arrest a Marine and the Marine punched him. The Marine's friends rescued him in the ensuing brawl and the patrol member disappeared.

COUNCIL COMPLAINS ABOUT MOTORISTS SPEEDING IN BORO'

Three Voice Objections To Rate of Speed on Wilson Ave., Beaver and Otter Sts.

ASK POLICE ACTION

Other Routine Affairs Are Discussed at Monthly Session

Violation of speed laws of the borough by motorists was the chief topic under discussion by Borough Council last night. "Another speedway has been opened in Bristol," said Councilman Rathke, sixth ward. He then explained to council that he had received numerous complaints about motorists speeding on Wilson avenue. He said that the motorists coming from defense plants turn into Wilson avenue off Green Lane and then dash down Wilson avenue to cut into Pond street to beat the traffic line on that thoroughfare.

Mr. Rathke said that he had four persons watching the traffic on Wilson avenue in addition to those who had complained. They all reported that the traffic laws were being violated, he said.

Richard T. Myers, third ward, was the next councilman to voice complaint. "Why, we have had a

Gives Rules for Prices For Sale of Solid Fuels

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(INS)—Opa today announced two rules under which wholesale and retail dealers in solid fuels will now establish the ceiling prices of services rendered in connection with their sales.

The two rules are:
1. If the dealer rendered a service during December 1941 he may charge for the same service not more than he charged then.

2. If a dealer cannot price his services in the first way, the nearest regional OPA office will, upon application, set the ceiling for him.

Customarily rendered are such services as carrying, wheeling, trimming and storing in the bin, bagging, shovel and dust treatment of coal.

Under the service rules, effective August 14th, a dealer may not now make a charge for a service which during the base period was given without charge.

Previously there was no specific provision for service charges although dealers were prohibited from raising maximum prices through an increase in service charges over the December 1941 levels.

HIGH OCTANE THEORIES

The voice of Vice President Wallace has produced some high octane economic theories but the man should be more careful to see that they don't explode in his face.

The Vice President said in a recent address in Iowa that large corporations believed in a policy of "scarcity economics" and that they "always believed in holding down production for profit."

He added: "There's only one program under which agriculture, labor, and, in my opinion, business as well, can prosper after the war, and that's all-out production."

The record shows that Mr. Wallace was Secretary of Agriculture from 1933 to 1940. It was during that period that the program was begun which resulted in paying farmers for failing to raise certain crops—it was during this period that there took place the slaughter of the little pigs. If that was not a period of promoting scarcity for profit, no period of the kind ever existed.

Mr. Wallace would have a difficult time to prove that large corporations believe in a policy of "scarcity economics."

Take the automobile industry. It turned out cars for the American people at lower and lower prices until the counties, states and nation were beside themselves trying to build roads fast enough to accommodate the growing number of automobiles.

Government showed a woeful lack of imagination in planning highways for the increasing number of automobiles, but the automobile manufacturing industry certainly never could be accused of trying to keep its product out of the hands of the American public.

Not did the automobile manufacturers ever stage a big bonfire and burn a half million cars as a means of raising the price of the machines.

There is no parallel in industry for the slaughter of the pigs.

It was the global war which led the New Deal to foster all out production in agriculture, and then it didn't know how to go about it because it was so thoroughly accustomed to promoting a policy of "scarcity."

Mr. Wallace's statements about corporations are no more surprising than his statement regarding politics. He says "The enemies of President Roosevelt have never admitted politics. The President admitted politics to prosecute the war."

Of all Wallace's frothings, that seems to be the one that calls for the curtain.

Doylestown School Finances Improve

$21,500, and the tax rate of 12 mills remains the same for the next year. There is a balance on hand in the board treasury for 1943-44 amounting to $11,922.97.

This means that the present board, in its conservative and economical policy of operation in war time that means numerous restrictions, is making an effort to lower the total indebtedness still more so that the borough will have a greater borrowing capacity for a new school building when the proper times arrives.

The auditor's report was submitted by J. Kirk Leatherman, Charles A. Liebig and James E. Goff.

The assessed valuation of taxable real estate in Doylestown borough amounts to $3,619,569. There were 2214 assessed with per capita tax and the per capita tax rate is $3.

During the past year non-resident pupils paid $29,164.49 in tuition. It is believed that the monthly tuition rate will be raised slightly for the next year.

Expenses of instruction at the local school during the past year cost $93,238.97. It cost $9,764.35 to operate the school plant, and the plant maintenance cost $1,779.91. Expenses of auxiliary agencies and coordinate activities amounted to $2,187.78 and it cost $1,919.77 for general control and an additional $3,175.78 for fixed charges. All told the current expenses for the past year amounted to $112,967.66.

Total receipts of the past year were $129,748.53, which included a balance on hand July 6, 1942, of $10,789.45 in the general fund. Property tax collected in 1942 was $42,894.96 and per capita tax was $7,964, or a total of $51,039.75 in taxes. Delinquent taxes amounted to $2,264.09. State appropriations for teachers, transportation, tuition and vocational amounted to an additional $35,422.05. Tuition of non-resident pupils and another $128.79 income brought the total receipts of the year to $129,748.53.

Per capita tax exonerations for 1942 amounted to $882 and lien on real estate amounting to $99.66 on property tax were filed. All told the amount of tax collected in 1942 amounted to $50,858.06 in Doylestown borough including $7,964 per capita and $42,894.96 property tax. The face of the 1942 tax duplicate was $53,496.72.

Assets of the Doylestown school district are listed at $309,991.42 divided as follows:

School buildings and sites, $260,699; textbooks and equipment, $32,599; 1942 tax, $999.18; 1941 tax, $1,718.31; 1940 tax, $385.27; previous to 1940 duplicate, $271.36; tuition receivable, $139.23; sinking fund balance, $2,146; general fund balance, $11,922.97.

Listed under expense of general control:

Secretary's office, salaries, $209; treasurer, commission or salary, $160; tax collector, $1,927.77; auditors, $15; census enumeration, $50; other expenses of general control, $527.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

means to avoid catastrophe. Every body else will be hurt. Barring a realization of these facts, now obviously lacking, and stern action to curb reckless spending, that is exactly where we are headed. Hardly anyone capable of coherent thought can doubt it.

THERE CAN be expected from this Administration neither appreciation of this situation nor firmness in dealing with it. The Administration still holds that spending produces prosperity; that no nation need live within its income and that the size of the national debt is not important because "we owe it to ourselves." No more puerile and absurd ideas have ever been advanced seriously by men in authority. It is not surprising that those who cherish them feel no necessity to avoid waste or preserve the fiscal equilibrium. Certainly, no one in the White House or the Treasury seems concerned on this score. Yet, the unnecessary waste of public funds in this war is almost beyond belief and there exists among those who are wasting them no sense of responsibility.

UNDER THESE conditions, Senator Byrd rises to point out that on July 1 this year there was in the Treasury, appropriated for war purposes at the request of the President, more than $293,000,000,000 of unexpended balances—money asked for but not spent. In addition, the war agencies have authority to make contracts for nearly $25,000,000,000 more. Up to July 1, we had spent, for war purposes, a little more than $100,000,000,000 in three years. Therefore, we have now on hand in unexpended balances more than twice as much as we have disbursed. Now then, Senator Byrd says we have sufficient unexpended funds to spend for war purposes $100,000,000,000 a year for the next two years without appropriating another nickel.

YET, the Senator says, already notice has been given of the Administration's purpose to ask for large additional war appropriations during the coming fiscal year. Very properly, Mr. Byrd asks "Why?" Why is it necessary to have unspent balances of more than $290,000,000,000? Why, with such a vast unspent balance, is it necessary to ask for further big appropriations? These are extremely pertinent questions and no one in the Administration has attempted to answer. Actually there is no answer. However, one fact ought to be made plain—and Senator Byrd makes it plain. A large part of this $290,000,000,000 unexpended balance is not obligated by contractual commitments. Virtually all of it is made on a lump-sum basis and is subject at the President's order to a transfer from one purpose to another as he sees fit.

WHAT THIS means, of course, is that Mr. Roosevelt has achieved complete independence of Congress on financial matters. Congress, by providing and permitting these vast unrestrained and unrestricted unexpended balances, has surrendered control of the purse string. It is supposed to hold. What Senator Byrd wants is to recover that control, to compel the expenditure of these huge balances before any more money is appropriated. Unless some such action is forced he says it is not difficult to visualize a debt far in excess of $300,000,000,000, which everyone will agree is a crushing debt, even if "we owe it to ourselves." A few days ago the President visualized a debt of $200,000,000,000, but the President in fiscal matters has rarely seen clearly or talked understandingly.

WHAT MR. BYRD wants is to provide every dollar needed for winning the war but to end this stultification of Congress and the risk to the nation of appropriating, at the President's request, so vastly more than is needed that $290,000,000,000 lie idle in the Treasury, subject to his order, while he prepares to ask for more. The statement seems to admit of no argument and it is encouraging that the Joint Economy Committee is shortly to inquire into the need of unexpended balances of such magnitude, the extent to which they are committed and the extent to which money is transferred. If any semblance of control over Federal finances is to be regained, it is an inquiry very badly needed, indeed.

THE PLAN is to complete it before the next Presidential request for money is sent to Congress. Perhaps if it is pushed hard enough the request may not be made at all. Certainly, Senator Byrd's unchallenged figures make it difficult to justify asking for more money. Every taxpayer, every insurance policyholder and savings bank depositor ought to be interested in this inquiry.

WILDCAT 13 by TOM GILL

CHAPTER FORTY

Guided only by those blue, intermittent flashes, they closed again. Blood was trickling down Alter's face; his swollen lips were purple beneath that grisly, unreal light, but always he came on.

And now, over his back and shoulders, Thorpe felt the need eating into his skin, burning its way down beneath his sweat-soaked shirt. In agony he tore his coat away, and like a cat Alter was on him. Almost Franz had him, his steel fingers closing around Drew's neck; but, doubling back, Thorpe wrenched himself away.

Free of those clutching fingers, Drew rose again, but his flesh was on fire. No sound in the darkness—they were both waiting for that next flash of light, and Drew knew that the stinging torture of the acid would not let him wait for long. Once more the electrodes hissed; once more in glacial bluish outline the room came to life, and just ahead Drew saw Franz bearing down. Crouching, he waited, then with all the power left to him he struck. Full on Franz's jaw the blow landed; a stab of pain darted through Drew's hand; he saw Franz rise upward, stagger, and fall.

Another flash, and Franz lay huddled beside the desk.

On hands and knees Drew crawled to the door, opened it, and fell unconscious to the floor.

Diaz was bending over Drew when he awoke to find him in a familiar bed.

Seeing Drew's eyes open, the doctor smiled a little dryly. "Sooner or later," he observed, "you or your friend always come to my hospital for repairs. But you are in no great need of me. I have cut away your clothes. They were soaked through with sulphuric acid—luckily for you, a weak solution."

Drew moistened his lips. "Where is Alter?"

"In bed up in his laboratory. He will bear the marks of your fight for many days."

"What about Nan?"

"Gloria is with her." Diaz's eyes flared up in sudden anger. "He struck her, that—" He broke off, and for a time he brooded; then as if he himself he murmured, "Then came." Moving back, he turned on the table light. "I have you now, but I have one piece of news for you before I go—a call from Dr. Marcvin. A successful operation on your friend spinal was performed this morning."

Drew pulled himself bolt upright in the bed. "You mean?" he almost shouted, "you mean I paid eyes?"

"You will please to be down and not disturb that bandage. Yes, he can see." The doctor moved away. "I shall lock your door for the night, now, and there will be a soldier stationed in the hall. It is better that you remain here. I do this for your safety. Good night."

Drew wondered if he read some special meaning in Diaz's words. He could not be sure. Of one thing alone he was certain—the surgeon's old dislike for him still lingered, but less strongly than before.

It was hours before Drew slept, and then only lightly. The sting of the acid, the memory of that fight, and the restoration of Spauld's sight all conspired to drive sleep away.

From the corridor outside the slow tread of feet came in to him. Was he in effect under some form of arrest? Or was Diaz alive to some new danger from Franz Alter?

So through the night, between sleep and waking, he lay, while the hands of the little clock dragged that way around the dial. An hour before dawn he heard a car drive up and the sound of low voices. Still later, from Alter's room above him, Drew thought he heard a slight movement, but he could not be sure. Then silence again except for the steadily marching feet outside. Drew closed his eyes.

Dawn trickled feebly through the heavy curtains of the room where Franz Alter lay. Dimly it lighted the sleeping figure beneath the sheets; then, strengthening, traced the outline of an other form standing quietly beside the bed.

For long minutes while the room grew brighter that silent waiting went on, and in the eyes of the watching figure was a strange blending of resolution and regret. At last he sighed, softly he touched the shoulder of the sleeping man, and Alter's slate-gray eyes opened.

"Excellent!" Franz made as if to rise, but Gleason's hand pressed on his shoulder.

"Quietly!" Gleason nodded in warning toward the door.

"Something has happened?"

"Much. Someone has bungled. Two hours ago Veraguan police raided the warehouse and found the entrance to the basement. At this moment their trucks are taking away the machine guns and the manifestos. Your staunch friend Diaz led the raid."

Franz's face had turned ashen as the saber scar across his cheek. "How," he fought for every breath—"how did they learn?"

"What does it matter? All that matters now is that Planet Export is done in Veragua. It means expropriation." Gleason opened and closed his hands. "The money-raiding democracy to the north will be much amused. And we were so near to marching!"

His voice choked with the bitterness of regret, but when next he spoke it was with the cold detachment of one pronouncing a final judgment. "You are failed, Franz. You let the Rio Bravo field slip through your fingers, you let your wife's money finance Drew Thorpe's, and now—this raid. The party, Franz, does not tolerate failure. It is just as well you do not go home."

On the edge of the bed Gleason laid a small pistol, and very slightly the other moved beneath the sheets. For the last time both men looked into each other's eyes, as little drops of perspiration gathered on Alter's lips.

"One plays for high stakes in this game of chance," Gleason's mouth went slack lower. "One must pay the price of failure. I go now to report."

Once more the huge form trembled, while through the coming dawn Franz Alter fought for courage, and the impassive figure waited quietly by the bed. Like a blood-stained spear, the first red shaft of sunrise pierced the half-drawn curtains, touching to flame that tiny pistol. The slate-gray eyes watched it, fascinated.

Then again the patiently insistent voice. "I am waiting, Franz. Must I—"

"No." Through stiff, unwilling lips he forced the answer. "No, Excellent." Unsteadily his hand reached forward to the pistol.

Ten days had brought changes up at Wildcat 13. A bustling survey camp had risen on the savanna; a crew of laborers was widening the road, and long lines of States Oil trucks rumbled up the hill with loads of pipe line. Wildcat 13 was in production!

The shacks had just been replaced by large frame buildings on the morning when Ray Cutter, standing and found Gloria and Drew arranging the furniture.

The States Oil superintendent seemed well content. "This just about winds it up." He tapped the heavy sheaf of papers in his hand. "I never had much doubt that the government would kick through with the permit ever since they found the Planet war house was a disguised arsenal. But it's just as well to have everything duly signed and sealed. From now on we're in the clear."

He smiled at Gloria. "That father of yours is an old fox. I don't believe he buys his American any better than ever, but he's sure boosted his stock with Veraguans and Americans both, the way he cracked down on the Planet outfit. Alter's big mistake was to raise his hand to Nan. That was the one thing Diaz couldn't stand."

With the ever-present handkerchief Cutter wiped his face. "Well, Planet Export is washed up for good."

But Drew shook his head. "Planet Export may be dead, but not the people who sent them. They'll be again. South America is too big, and too defenseless for them to hold off long."

Cutter shrugged. "I wouldn't know. And it's not one of my worries." He grinned. "Right now my worry is what to get you two for a wedding present." He turned to Gloria. "How's my old buddy Dr. Diaz feel about your marrying this gringo?"

"He will not even talk of it," the girl answered.

Cutter climbed into his car. "I tell you what, you name the first boy after him, and he'll think the whole thing was his own idea." His face sobered. "What about Nan, Alter? Feel about your marrying this gringo?"

"He will not even talk of it," the girl answered.

Cutter climbed into his car. "I tell you what, you name the first boy after him, and he'll think the whole thing was his own idea." His face sobered. "What about Nan, Alter? Feel about your marrying this gringo?"

Doylestown Yeoman Now Stationed at Washington

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 10 — Miss Erna Linsenmaier, a graduate of Buckingham high school, is among the women reservists now on duty with the U. S. Navy in Washington, D. C., according to an announcement from the Office of Public Relations of the Navy Department.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Emil Linsenmaier, South Main street, and is now a yeoman, stationed at the Bureau of Naval Personnel. Miss Linsenmaier reported aboard on February 16th.

As an enlisted woman in the U. S. Naval Reserve Yeoman Linsenmaier is one of several thousand women who have been assigned to Washington to serve as direct replacements for Navy men, releasing them to fight at sea with the fleet.

Miss Linsenmaier, who was at one time employed at the Department of Public Assistance, here, received her recruit and specialist training at Stillwater, Okla.

We thank thee for the light of the sun, which casts its light and warmth over all the earth, bringing seeds into blossom and fruit, bringing strength to weakened bodies, bringing light into a darkened world. We thank thee for the rain which dampens the earth and nourishes the crops. We thank thee for thy love which makes all these gifts possible. ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

An authentic background for many scenes in "Pilot No. 5," dramatic story of an American fighter pilot which opens Wednesday at the Grand Theatre, was provided by the Cal-Aero army air corps training school near Pomona, Cal.

Franchot Tone, Gene Kelly, Van Johnson and other male members of the cast, spent several days at the huge air corps training center filming scenes from the timely movie. During that time they carefully inspected the camp and gained an insight into the rigid training air corps cadets receive.

Marsha Hunt, who last scored in "Seven Sweethearts," has another important role in "Pilot No. 5."

BRISTOL THEATRE

Franchot Tone had to put on a specially-built shoe with a four-inch thick sole and weighing five pounds during the filming of the North African adventure film of the Rommel rout, "Five Graves to Cairo." The picture is showing for the last time today at the Bristol Theatre with Anne Baxter co-starred with Tone, and Erich von Stroheim playing Marshal Rommel. Tone had to wear the strange footgear in order to give himself the appearance and walk of a man with a club-foot, his disguise for his role of British soldier-spy in the picture.

FORT DIX EASILY BEATS FLEETWINGS IN LOP-SIDED GAME

Airplane Workers' IX Plays Worse Than Schoolboy Team

SCORE ENDS AT 20 TO 1

Fort Dix Soldiers Make A Total of 16 Hits in Game

The Fleetwings team played worse than a schoolboy team last evening on the high school field as it was trounced by the Fort Dix nine, 20-1, in a lopsided game which saw the soldiers avenge an early season defeat.

The Bristol team appeared lickered in the first inning when with two out Dick Hirst dropped a fly in center to allow a pair of tallies to cross the plate. From then on, it was droopy playing for the Fleetwings as the Fort Dix boys took advantage of everything to pile up the runs.

The Fort Dix soldiers made a total of sixteen hits and were aided by ten Fleetwings errors. They ran the bases in free style and easily stretched hits which should have held them to first base. Every player in the Fort Dix lineup had at least one hit with Parelo leading the attack with three bingles. Lutzanski, former Harrisburg player, put the ball over the fence in the fourth but ground rules held him to a double.

While the Jersey men were slugging the ball, the Fleetwings had difficulty in solving the looks of Stroud Fields, of Bentonville, Arkansas. For four frames, Fields held the local aircraftmen without a run or hit but in the fifth a pair of doubles by D'Asendio and Mitchell gave the localites their only marker of the tilt.

Manager Russ Stanton, of the homesteaders, started Georgie Friedman on the hill and he was relieved by Stout during the 11-run up-burst of the soldiers in the third. Before the uprising was quelled, Jack Allen took up the pitching burden and finished the game.

ROHM & HAAS NINE SETS DIAMOND BACK

BRISTOL SUBURBAN LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
ROHM & HAAS - VOLTZ-TEXACO
(Maple Beach field)

The Rohm and Haas nine made definitely sure that the Diamond team would be out of the second half race by handing it a 7-3 beating last evening on the Maple Beach field. The triumph put the chemical workers in a deadlock with Voltz-Texaco for first place. These two clubs meet tonight.

Wilson Holland, on the mound for the first time this season, held the Diamond players to six hits while the winners made 12 off the pitching of Henny Morgan and Bob Falkenberg. Hetherington, G. Ritter, and Sullivan led the attack against the Diamond hurlers while Walt Foerst had two of the Diamond six hits.

The game was close until the third when Rohm and Haas took a 2-run lead and increased it by counting another pair of runs in the fourth. Holland bore down from the second inning on and blanked the Mill streeters in the last four frames.

speedway on Otter street so long that we are getting used to it," he said.

Then Councilman Joseph Foster, fourth ward, voiced objection to the speeding motorists along Beaver street. "They race out there 60 and 70 miles per hour," he stated.

Then the councilmen directed their complaints to Councilman Roy P. Fry, chairman of police committee. Mr. Fry said that Chief Jones had had men out checking on the violators.

Councilman William Warner, second ward, said that he had seen Chief Jones and Burgess Anderson making a survey the other day.

Police reported a number of arrests during the month of July and that the cases had been disposed of as follows:

Discharged, four; held for court, five; fined, eight; continued, one.

The police radio car answered 174 alarms. Seven were fined for "all-night" parking and two were discharged. Nineteen incandescent lights were reported out. Eleven are lights and 14 bridge lights were reported out. Ten lodgers were given shelter.

Councilman William Pearson, sixth ward, asked what progress was being made in having an ordinance drawn to compel property owners to have the weeds cut down on their property. Councilman Winter stated that the matter was in the hands of the borough solicitor.

Owing to the absence of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, president of council, the meeting was called to order by Burgess Anderson who asked that a temporary chairman be selected. William Warner was chosen to preside.

Councilmen absent were: Wagner, Vandegriff, Roche, Mulligan, Galzerano, Clark and Conklin.

garments, and 15 women finished 23 pairs of gloves in 18 hours. Eight women from the branch served 51 hours at the food package center, Philadelphia. Mrs. Perkins has been asked by Mrs. H. L. Erlichman, chapter chairman in charge of building the nine hole golf course for the Valley Forge Hospital for wounded soldiers of this war, to help in collecting golf clubs, new or used, for this project.

The game of golf serves a dual purpose—to help in restoring muscular action as well as pleasantly occupying the time of convalescents.

The acute shortage of volunteer nurses for the armed forces still exists and it is feared that unless quotas are fulfilled, drafting of nurses may become a reality. Red Cross urges all home-loving women to come forward and enroll for the home nursing course which indirectly relieves registered nurses and thus helps with the recruiting problem.

In the Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced massive aerial blows at the Japanese base at Salamaua, New Guinea, and the Vila airdrome and Bairoko harbor in the Solomons.

Salamaua was blasted with 103 tons of explosives in a coordinated attack by heavy and medium bombers while Allied artillery, supporting American and Australian and ground troops approaching the enemy base, bombarded Jap forward positions.

In the Solomons, the Vila airdrome on Kolombangara Island was raked with 63 tons of bombs for the second successive day while 22 tons were dumped on the Bairoko harbor area on adjoining New Georgia Island in support of American jungle troops advancing northward from the captured Munda airdrome.

NEWTOWN

A week's visit is being paid by "Billy" Shuster, Glen Rock, N. J., to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Shuster.

Friends in Newtown were visited over the week-end by Miss Miriam B. Geiger, Philadelphia. Miss Geiger has now gone to Boston, Mass., where she has accepted a position.

The Rev. Albert Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, of Doers, visited the Rev. Mr. Taylor's parents last week. The Rev. Mr. Taylor is taking a special course at Bloomsburg State Teachers College this summer.

Mrs. Minnie Beatty is in Abington Hospital recuperating from an operation which she underwent last week.

ST. LOUIS (INS)—Anxious to get into the thick of the fighting, a group of refugees from occupied France, reported at Scott Field recently to study radio communications. They had fled to North Africa previous to their arrival in the United States.

Construction of 100 Houses is Under Way

The houses will be for defense workers only.

The landscaping is to be a feature of the project, all roadways being laid out in loops. The landscaping and architectural work will be in keeping with the very latest standards, and the color combinations on both the interior and exterior will be of harmonious arrangement. Each property will have a minimum of 5000 square feet of land, and each house will be fully insulated. The selling price has been placed at $5000 each, and the total project will represent an investment of a half million dollars. Water will be furnished by Bristol borough.

Contractors with machinery arrived at the project yesterday shortly before noon, and the work of excavating got underway immediately.

Dr. Fell is Oldest Alumnus of U. of P.

Dr. Fell was born in Buckingham on October 21, 1850, the son of Jesse and Priscilla Sands Fell. He is of the sixth generation of a family which settled in Bucks county 138 years ago in 1705.

Dr. Fell received his early education at Church's School, which had been founded by his great-grandfather, and later graduated from the Doylestown English and Classical Seminary. He taught school for two years and was principal of the Hughesian Free School, Buckingham.

Dr. Fell attended Lafayette College for two years and then entered the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating in 1874. He then spent a year as medical resident of the Bedford Street Mission.

In 1875, Dr. Fell started practice of his profession in Buckingham, and remained in that locality until 1888 when he moved to Doylestown. He attended lectures for medical graduates at the Philadelphia Polytechnic College in 1890 and was elected the first Fellow of that college.

On September 14, 1933, the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania presented a testimonial to Dr. Fell "in recognition of his 59 years of medical service faithfully performed to his community in the traditional ideals of the medical profession."

Dr. Fell always took a keen interest in community affairs before he was physically incapacitated to carry on his practice, and he still is vitally interested in Doylestown.
